

COUNTRY WATCH

Western Weekly:

24th October 2014

Colleagues,

The Country Watch team are going through a very busy period at the moment with many changes coming from an organisational point of view. The 1st November will see me taking over as Sergeant for Country Watch for the whole of mainland Hampshire and Insp Lou HUBBLE as Inspector overseeing it. As such normal service may be slightly affected as we move over to new working practices. Effectively, you will still have your local Country Watch Team of Scott Graham and Alan McCaffery, assisted by PCSO Olie Hulse. However, over the coming months Test Valley area will get its own Country Watch officer and PCSO to look after it and Scott and Alan will take responsibility for just the New Forest area. Hampshire Police as a whole are undertaking a far reaching organisation change programme, which will see changes in many areas of personnel and locations. Many officers' roles and job responsibilities are changing as part of the programme. I consider myself privileged to be remaining with Country Watch and taking on the rest of the County. These changes should mean that the Country Watch team, which is expanding slightly across the County, will be better placed to provide a pro-active policing team to deal with rural crime issues.

This week I attended the Animal Accident Reduction Group meeting where I met with colleagues from various organisations, such as the National Parks Authority, Verderers, CDA, British Deer Society and the police amongst others. Collectively we meet to discuss and agree strategy around reducing animal casualties in the New Forest area. Many innovative ideas are brought to the table to achieve this. The most recent of these is the use of an infra red speed detection camera which is being deployed across day and night over the coming months to deal with speeding motorists, who are frequently the cause of animal road traffic collisions on the open forest roads. You may have seen this van in use, don't say you haven't been warned!

With the dark evenings upon us, the clocks going back, please check your security lighting is in good working order. Whilst the weather is still kind it would be a good time to do those repairs to your outbuildings and fences to ensure they are secure for winter. Windy weather is a good shield for thieves and I am certain we will be getting some of that over the coming month or two.

Kind Regards

Debby Holman
Western Country Watch Sergeant
